FOREWORD

Volume VII brings to a close the records of all Massachusetts men who are known to have served in any units of the Army during the Civil War. It bridges the gap between the Army and the Navy and contains the records of all officers of the Navy who were appointed from Massachusetts and of all the enlisted men in that branch of the service through those whose names begin with the letter E.

When the preface appearing in Volume I was written it was intended that the condensed historical narratives appearing before each regiment, battery or other unit should be based on those which are found in Higginson's MASSACHUSETTS IN THE ARMY AND NAVY, but as the work advanced it became evident that the sketches appearing in that work were not well adapted for use as originally planned. Nor could any condensed histories of Massachusetts organizations be found which could be revised and readapted for use in these volumes.

Moreover, nothing existed in published narrative form concerning miscellaneous units such as brigade bands, Corps d'Afrique bands, Hancock's Corps, or the First Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, which was made up of Confederate prisoners who had enlisted in the Federal service, over three hundred and fifty of whom had been credited to the city of Boston. Nothing had been written to explain the existence of the Veteran Reserve Corps or the origin of the United States Colored Troops. Finally, no narrative material was available which would throw light upon the matter of appointments, enlistments, and credits in the United States Navy.

Hence, as the publication of the work proceeded the compiler, Mr. Cross, found it necessary to write practically new historical sketches in every case, gleaning the material from the original general and special orders and annual reports of the Adjutant General of Massachusetts for the years 1861 to 1865, from the published regimental and battery histories, the Acts of Congress passed during the war period, and the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies and Navies published by the War Department.

It is believed that combined with the brevity of these historical narratives and introductory paragraphs there is a substantial degree of accuracy which will make the entire work of greater value to those who may wish to use it for reference.

John H. Agnew,
The Adjutant General.

BRIGADE BANDS

By an Act of Congress approved July 22, 1861, it was provided that each regiment of volunteers in the United States service should have a band of 24 musicians. In pursuance of this act all three years infantry regiments raised in Massachusetts from the 1st to the 28th Infantry inclusive, together with the 1st Massachusetts Cavalry, had regimental bands at the time of their muster into the United States service.

Before the first year of the Civil War was done the numbers of enlisted men in the various regiments had become so greatly depleted by battle casualties, sickness, and other causes that it became clearly apparent that one band to a regiment was not necessary, but that a band to a brigade would in a large majority of cases be amply sufficient.

Hence, by Sec. 5 of the Act of Congress approved July 17, 1862, it was provided that the law authorizing regimental bands should be repealed, and that the musicians composing the same should be mustered out within 30 days after the passage of the act. Under this section most of the members of the regimental bands were mustered out during the first half of the month of August, 1862.

By Sec. 6 of the above Act of July 17, 1862, brigade bands were established, each to consist of 16 musicians. The enlistment records indicate that many of these bands were organized in the latter half of the year 1863, many of the best musicians who had served in the old regimental bands re-enlisting in the brigade bands.

Even after the abolition of the regimental bands authorized under the Act of July 22, 1861, two musicians were still allowed to each company of infantry, and in a few Massachusetts regiments band instruments were purchased by subscription and bands were organized which acquitted themselves very creditably, but they were never officially recognized as regimental bands. The "band" of the 33d Massachusetts Infantry was organized by Israel Smith of New Bedford, Mass., principal musician in Company "H" of that regiment, and was considered one of the best organizations of its kind in the service.

Mr. Patrick S. Gilmore of Boston, one of the famous bandmasters of his day, who had gone to the front in September, 1861, as the leader of the band of the 24th Massachusetts Regiment, was authorized by Adjutant General Schouler in Special Order No. 340, dated June 25, 1863, to recruit musicians for the Volunteer Service, and he was largely influential in enlisting Massachusetts musicians for the brigade bands. The following are the records of Massachusetts men known to have served in these organizations.

CORPS D'AFRIQUE BANDS

Corps d'Afrique was a term originally applied to regiments composed of men of African descent raised in the Southern States for the service of the Union, especially to those enlisted in the Department of the Gulf. In the early fall of 1863 the following order was issued by the commander of the Colored Troops in that department:

> Head Quarters U. S. Forces,
> Port Hudson, La., Sept. 4th, 1863.
>
> — Extract —
>
> Capt. M. M. Hawes, A. Q. M.,
> Sir:
>
> In accordance with Special Orders No. 217, Head Quarters Department of the Gulf, you will proceed North and there recruit according to existing regulations two (2) bands for the Corps d'Afrique.
>
> I am Sir,
> Resp'y. Yr. Ob't. Servt.,
> Geo. L. Andrews,
> Brig. Gen'l. Vols.,
> Com'd'g. Corps d'Afrique.

It is evident that both these bands were recruited in Massachusetts, as about two months after the date of this order the following letter of authorization was issued by Captain Hawes:

> Boston, November 13, 1863.
>
> In accordance to the above order Mr. P. S. Gilmore of Boston is authorized by me to recruit two bands for service with the Corps d'Afrique, Dept. of the Gulf, on or before December 10th, 1863.
>
> M. M. Hawes,
> Capt. & A. Q. M.

Mr. Gilmore, who was rated very high as a bandmaster, and who had been leader of the band of the 24th Regiment, Massachusetts Infantry, as we have already shown, had been given authority by Special Order No. 340, dated June 25, 1863, to recruit musicians for the Volunteer Service of the United States. Hence, under that authorization, he proceeded to enlist musicians for the two bands of the Corps d'Afrique.

One of these bands went into the service under the leadership of John Larkin of Charlestown, who had had service in the band of the 2d Rhode Island Infantry during the first year of the war. This was known as the 1st Brigade Band, Corps d'Afrique.

The second of the two bands was led by John Laflin, a native of Charlton, Mass., though his residence is given as Boston. This was known as the 2d Brigade Band, Corps d'Afrique. Both bands served in the Department of the Gulf.

The leader and all of the members of the first band were mustered into the service Nov. 24, 1863, and the leader and most of the musicians in the second on Nov. 28, 1863. The musicians were all white men many of whom had served in Massachusetts regimental bands in the early part of the war.

Both bands were held in the service until Aug. 8, 1865, when they were mustered out. The names and records of the 32 musicians are given below.

HANCOCK'S CORPS

(United States Veteran Volunteer Infantry)

In the late fall of 1864 it was decided by the War Department that a new army corps should be raised, the privates to consist only of able-bodied men who had already served honorably not less than two years and hence were not subject to the draft. The commissioned officers likewise must have had not less than two years of honorable service. The term of enlistment was fixed at one year, as it was assumed that before the expiration of that period the war would be at an end. However, thirteen of the men whose records appear below enlisted for three years.

The unit thus established was to be known as the First Corps, and Major General Winfield S. Hancock, who had been compelled to relinquish command of the 2d Corps, Army of the Potomac, because of wounds received at Gettysburg, was designated as its commander. The general's name gave such prestige to the organization that it became generally known as "Hancock's Corps", and to this was commonly added the title United States Veteran Volunteer Infantry.

General Order No. 287, War Department, which authorized the raising and organizing of this new volunteer army corps, may be found in Part III, Volume XLII, Series I of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies, Page 728.

One of the unusual provisions of the above order of organization was that each recruit who should preserve his arms to the end of his term might retain them as his own on being honorably discharged from service.

Recruiting for the First Corps did not begin in good earnest until very late in the year 1864, and some enlistments were made as late as April, 1865. In all nine regiments of infantry were raised, but before the corps was fully organized the Confederacy collapsed, its armies surrendered, and the war was done.

The records of enlistments and discharges, however, show that most of the men who enlisted in the First Corps were held to service until the year for which they had enlisted expired. The names and records of the 117 Massachusetts men known to have enlisted in "Hancock's Corps" are given below.

FIRST REGIMENT UNITED STATES VOLUNTEER INFANTRY (CONFEDERATE PRISONERS)

At the various prison camps in the North where captured Confederates were confined, there were many prisoners who claimed that their sympathies had always been with the Union, that they had been impressed into the Confederate service against their wills, and that they desired to enlist in the army of the United States. This was especially true of prisoners confined at Camp Lookout, Md., where Brigadier General Gilman Marston was in command.

Under date of Dec. 27, 1863, Major General Benjamin F. Butler, within whose department Point Lookout was located, applied to the Secretary of War for permission to enlist such prisoners as might desire to enter the regular or volunteer service of the United States. The matter was referred to President Lincoln for consideration, and on Jany. 2, 1864, he addressed a communication to General Butler authorizing the discharge of such prisoners at Point Lookout as came within the following classes: First, those who would take the prescribed oath of allegiance to the United States Government and would, with the consent of General Marston, enlist in the service of the Union; Second, those who would take the oath and whose homes lay safely within the Federal lines.

Just one week after receipt of the President's communication General Butler directed General Marston to present to every prisoner at Point Lookout the following questionnaire:

First. Do you desire to be sent South as a prisoner of war for exchange?

Second. Do you desire to take the oath of allegiance and parole, and enlist in the Army or Navy of the United States, and if so in which?

Third. Do you desire to take the oath and parole and be sent North to work on public works, under penalty of death, if found in the South before the end of the war?

Fourth. Do you desire to take the oath of allegiance and go to your home within the lines of the U. S. Army, under like penalty, if found South beyond those lines during the war?

Those prisoners answering the second question affirmatively were allowed to enlist in the service of the United States, and Lieutenant Frederick M. Norcross, an officer in the 30th Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry who had been severely wounded at Plains Store near Port Hudson, La., in May, 1863, was detailed as recruiting officer at Point Lookout. Under date of March 11, 1864, General Butler reported that he already had nearly a regiment of Confederate prisoners recruited for the Federal service.

The soldiers thus enlisted were credited to various Northern towns and cities, a total of 355 being credited to Boston, Mass. Their names and records appear below. All served in what was known as the First Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry. This regiment did duty at Norfolk, Va., during the late summer of 1864, but was transferred in the fall of that year to Fort Rice, Dakota Territory where it was employed against the hostile Indians. Here it lost one man killed, one wounded, one drowned, and 34 who died of disease, most of the latter during the winter and spring following their arrival. The members of Companies B, C, D, E, H, and K were mustered out November 27, 1865, while those of Companies A, F, G, and I were mustered out May 10 and 21, 1866.

MASSACHUSETTS ENLISTMENTS IN VETERAN RESERVE CORPS

(Originally the Invalid Corps.)

The Invalid Corps, which was the forerunner of the Veteran Reserve Corps, was organized under authority of General Order No. 105, War Department, dated April 28, 1863.

A similar corps had existed in Revolutionary times as is shown by a Resolve of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, adopted June 4, 1781, and concurred in by the Senate, July 6, 1781, providing that there be furnished to Captain Moses McFarland, commanding the Invalids doing duty in and about Boston, 146 pairs of overalls, 146 hunting frocks, 146 hats, 146 knapsacks, and 146 pairs of stockings, and that the same be charged to the United States.

The Invalid Corps of the Civil War period was created to make suitable use in a military or semi-military capacity of soldiers who had been rendered unfit for active field service on account of wounds or disease contracted in line of duty, but who were still fit for garrison or other light duty, and were, in the opinion of their commanding officers, meritorious and deserving.

Those serving in the Invalid Corps were divided into two classes: Class 1, partially disabled soldiers whose periods of service had not yet expired, and who were transferred directly to the Corps there to complete their terms of enlistment; Class 2, soldiers who had been discharged from the service on account of wounds, disease, or other disabilities, but who were yet able to perform light military duty and desired to do so. Such men were allowed, under General Order No. 105 above referred to, to enlist in the Invalid Corps. As the war went on it proved that the additions to the Corps hardly equaled the losses by discharge or otherwise, so it was finally ordered that men who had had two years of honorable service in the Army or Marine Corps might enlist in the Invalid Corps without regard to disability.

The records of Massachusetts soldiers in Class 1 above, i.e., those who were transferred to the Corps, will be found completed in the rosters of the companies in which they originally enlisted. The list which follows is made up of men who belonged to Class 2, those who actually enlisted in the Corps and were credited to municipalities in Massachusetts.

By General Order No. 111, dated March 18, 1864, the title Veteran Reserve Corps was substituted for that of Invalid Corps, and this title is used in almost every case in the present work, whether the reference is to transfers and enlistments prior to March 18, 1864, or to those made subsequent to that date.

The men serving in the Veteran Reserve Corps were organized into two battalions, the First Battalion including those whose disabilities were comparatively slight and who were still able to handle a musket and do some marching, also to perform guard or provost duty; the Second Battalion being made up of men whose disabilities were more serious, who had perhaps lost limbs or suffered some other grave injury. These latter were commonly employed as cooks, orderlies, nurses, or guards in public buildings. There were from first to last from two to three times as many men in the First Battalion as in the Second, and the soldiers in the First Battalion performed a wide variety of duties. They furnished guards for the Confederate prison camps at Johnson's Island, Ohio, Elmira, N. Y., Point

Lookout, Md., and elsewhere. They furnished details to the provost marshals to arrest bounty jumpers and to enforce the draft. They escorted substitutes, recruits, and prisoners to and from the front. They guarded railroads, did patrol duty in Washington City, and even manned the defenses of the city during Early's raid in July, 1864.

An excellent sketch of the history of the Veteran Reserve Corps may be found in Volume V, Series III, of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies, pages 543 to 568.

There were first and last twenty-four regiments in the Corps. In the beginning each regiment was made up of six companies of the First Battalion and four of the Second Battalion, but in the latter part of the war this method of organization was not strictly adhered to. The 18th Regiment, for example, which rendered exceptionally good service at Belle Plain, Port Royal, and White House Landing, Va., in the spring and early summer of 1864, and in or near Washington City in the latter part of the summer and through the fall of that year, was made up of only six Second Battalion companies.

In the following list the prior service of the soldier is not always shown, as in some cases he had served in an organization for some other State, and the details of his earlier enlistment do not appear upon our records. Where the prior service is known, reference is made to it.

Again, not all the men whose records appear below were residents of Massachusetts. Some resided and enlisted in other States, but were credited on the quota of Massachusetts and were paid bounties by this State. In every case where they are known to have served on the quota or to the credit of this Commonwealth their records are given.

MASSACHUSETTS OFFICERS IN UNITED STATES COLORED TROOPS

During the last two years of the Civil War about one hundred and sixty regiments of United States Colored Troops were organized, some in South Carolina, some in North Carolina, some in Louisiana, and others in various States both North and South.

The commissioned officers in these colored organizations were almost without exception white men who had distinguished themselves while serving as soldiers in white regiments and had won promotion to commissioned rank.

The section immediately following contains the names and records of all Massachusetts officers known to have held commissions in units of United States Colored Troops.

It is in many cases difficult to determine and to state clearly the name of the organization to which an officer was assigned at the time of his appointment thereto. This difficulty is due to the repeated changes that were made in the designations of various units.

For example, the 33d and 34th Regiments, United States Colored Infantry, were organized respectively as the 1st and 2d South Carolina Colored Volunteers, the 35th, 36th, and 37th Regiments, as the 1st, 2d, and 3d North Carolina Colored Volunteers, and none of the above units were known as United States Colored Infantry until February, 1864.

Again the 73d, 74th, 75th, and 76th Regiments were first known as the 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Louisiana Native Guards respectively, and later as the 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Regiments of Infantry, Corps d'Afrique. Not until April, 1864, were they numbered as regiments of United States Colored Infantry.

In many of the cases which follow the unit to which an officer was assigned is called by its final designation regardless of whether or not it had received that designation before the officer was appointed to it. This policy has been followed largely because it was under that final designation that the names of all these officers appear in Part VIII of the Official Army Register of the Volunteer Force of the United States Army for the Years 1861, '62, '63, '64, '65.

UNITED STATES COLORED TROOPS

Of the 2300 or more men serving in different units of United States Colored Troops to the credit of Massachusetts almost all were enlisted in the southern States under authority granted in Section 3 of the Act of Congress approved July 4, 1864, which section reads as follows:

> "Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the Executive of any of the States to send recruiting agents into any of the States declared to be in rebellion, except the States of Arkansas, Tennessee, and Louisiana, to recruit volunteers under any call under the provisions of this act, who shall be credited to the State, and to the respective subdivisions thereof, which may procure the enlistment."

The authority given in this Section was promulgated through the War Department by General Orders No. 227, dated July 9, 1864. Advantage was immediately taken by Massachusetts, and General Order No. 27, A. G. O. Mass., dated July 14, 1864, outlines the method to be followed in securing recruits under this law.

The plan employed was as follows: The Governor appointed Joseph M. Day of Barnstable, Mass., as Provost Marshal of the Commonwealth with the rank of colonel. He then established recruiting agencies at six different points in the South, one at Washington, D. C., for the Department of Northeastern Virginia, one at Fortress Monroe, Va., for the Department of Southeastern Virginia, one at New Berne, N. C., for the State of North Carolina, one at Hilton Head, S. C., for the States of South Carolina and Florida, one at Nashville, Tenn., for the States of Georgia and Alabama, and one at Vicksburg, Miss., for the State of Mississippi. An agent for recruiting, with the title of Assistant Provost Marshal, was appointed for each department, the same to be responsible directly to the Provost Marshal of the Commonwealth, to whom they were to report.

A Board of Recruitment consisting of five members was also established, the function of which was to look after the rights of the cities and towns in the apportioning and crediting of recruits.

The number of recruits recorded as having been secured at each of the agencies is here given: Washington, D. C., 25; Fortress Monroe, Va., 209; New Berne, N. C., 182; Hilton Head, S. C., 491; Nashville, Tenn., 77; Vicksburg, Miss., 1370; making a total of 2354. The small number secured at Washington, D. C., is explained by the fact that that city was flooded with recruiting agents from all the loyal States all of whom were after recruits for their respective States.

The apportionment of recruits to the various municipalities in this Commonwealth was made in the following manner: Cities and towns desiring to obtain recruits under the law were allowed to deposit with the Treasurer of the Commonwealth to the credit of the Provost Marshal of the Commonwealth sums of money equal to $125. for each recruit desired, but no city or town was to be allowed a number exceeding twenty-five per cent of any existing quota assigned thereto.

The money thus deposited was used by the Provost Marshal to pay the expense of securing men through the recruiting agents in the various departments, and any sums of money remaining unexpended were returned to the cities and towns which had deposited the same.

It was provided by General Order No. 27, above referred to, that any person not required by law to perform military duty but who desired to furnish a representative recruit might do so by depositing with the State Treasurer the sum of $125. as above. Of the entire number of men secured by Massachusetts under the Section above quoted 586 were representative recruits. Several were furnished by patriotic women. The names of all these recruits together with the names of the persons furnishing the same may be found on pages 914 to 922, Serial Number 126, Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies.

MASSACHUSETTS OFFICERS IN THE UNITED STATES NAVY

During the Civil War period Massachusetts was well represented by distinguished Naval commanders of the old school who reflected great honor on the State. Among these were Commodore Charles H. Davis, who commanded the Mississippi flotilla from June to October, 1862, and in February of the following year attained the rank of Rear Admiral; the Selfridges, father and son, the younger of whom, Lieutenant Commander Thomas O. Selfridge, Jr., so distinguished himself in the Vicksburg and Red River campaigns in 1863, in the attack on Fort Fisher in January, 1865, and on other occasions that at the close of the war he was unanimously recommended by a board of admirals to be advanced thirty numbers in rank for conspicuous gallantry in battle; and John Ancrum Winslow, who as Captain commanding the KEARSARGE on one June morning in 1864, off Cherbourg, France, sent the Confederate cruiser ALABAMA to the bottom of the ocean of which it had so long been a scourge.

Nor should we omit to mention Lieutenant Joseph B. Smith, who laid down his life defending the frigate CONGRESS from the attack of the iron clad MERRIMAC in Hampton Roads in March, 1862, nor Lieutenant Commander Jonathan M. Wainwright, who fell while in command of the HARRIET LANE in the harbor of Galveston, Texas, where she was attacked by overwhelming numbers on the first day of January, 1863.

But the expansion of our Naval establishment immediately after the outbreak of the Civil War demanded a correspondingly large increase in its officer personnel. Hundreds of ships and craft of all kinds which could be converted into war vessels were secured by purchase or charter or otherwise and added to the Navy. Each vessel so acquired demanded its full complement of officers and men. The seamen were secured by enlistment, the officers by appointment, and as temporary volunteer officers they had the term "acting" prefixed to their rank.

Section 2 of the Act of Congress approved July 24, 1861, confirmed any appointments which the Secretary of the Navy either had made or might thereafter make of acting lieutenants, acting paymasters, acting assistant surgeons, and acting masters and masters' mates, these appointments to continue until the return of the vessels to which they were respectively assigned or until the suppression of the insurrection.

Again, Section 20 of an Act of Congress approved July 16, 1862, provided that the pay of all these volunteer officers appointed under the first act named should be the same as that of officers of like grade in the regular Navy.

Finally by Section 3 of another act, approved March 3, 1863, the appointments of acting assistant paymasters and acting ensigns were authorized under the same conditions as those of other officers named above. Hundreds of volunteer officers of the ranks above given, together with acting first, second, and third assistant engineers, appear in the Navy Register as early as 1862. Many of these acquitted themselves with great distinction during the progress of the war and proved themselves fully the equals of officers of the regular Naval establishment.

Thousands of these emergency officers were appointed from time to time, nearly two thousand from our own State. Many remained in the service until the end of the war and were advanced in rank from time to time. At the close of the conflict most of them resigned and were honorably discharged from the service, and the Navy returned to its peace time status.

N. B. In the following lists the terms Recg. Ship, School Ship, Store Ship, Supply Steamer, etc. have been used before the names of vessels entitled to such designations. Where no designation is used the regular term U. S. Ship is to be understood.

So numerous were the transfers of officers from ship to ship that it is not assumed that the name of every vessel on which an officer may have served is given in all cases. Again, as there were frequent transfers of vessels from squadron to squadron, it is often impossible to determine to what squadron a ship was attached at a given time, as the dates of transfer are unknown. The official Navy Registers of 1863, 64, 65, and 66 only show the squadron to which a ship was attached on January 1 of each year.

It has only been attempted to give the names of the vessels and the names of the squadrons to which each officer is known to have been attached at some time during his service.

The receiving ships as a rule were not attached to any squadrons but were stationed at navy yards or naval stations, the OHIO at Boston, the NORTH CAROLINA at New York, the PRINCETON at Philadelphia, the ALLEGHANY at Baltimore, etc.

ENLISTMENTS IN THE UNITED STATES NAVY

Until the latter part of February, 1864, no credits were allowed by the General Government for enlistments in the United States Navy. This policy bore with especial severity upon the maritime States of the North and upon such Massachusetts municipalities as Gloucester, Salem, Marblehead, Boston, and New Bedford, all of which had been compelled to fill the entire quotas assigned to them by Army enlistments, regardless of how many of their sons might have enlisted in the Navy and who on United States ships of war were doing their part toward the restoration of the Union.

This injustice was partly rectified by Section 9 of the Act of Congress approved February 24, 1864, which provided that thereafter men enlisting in the Naval service might be "credited to the ward, town, township, precinct, or election district" in which they were enrolled and liable for duty.

But more than 22,000 Massachusetts men had enlisted in the Naval service before the passage of the above act, and for those enlistments the State had received no credit and could receive none under the existing law. Strong appeals were from time to time made to Congress to remedy this injustice.

In the midsummer of 1864 Governor Andrew went in person to Washington to look after the interests of Massachusetts and the welfare of its soldiers. It was during his stay in the Capital that the Act of July 4, 1864, was passed, Section 8 of which provided that all persons in the Naval service of the United States who had entered said service during the war and who had not been credited to the quota of any town, district, ward, or State, by reason of their being in said service prior to February 24, 1864, should be enrolled and credited to the quotas of the town, ward, district, or State in which they respectively resided at the time when they entered the Naval service.

Residence was a fact not always easy to determine in the case of men who had spent most of their lives on the sea, hence in carrying into effect the law allowing Naval credits the Secretary of War decided that the men should be credited to the State in which they enlisted unless it should be proved that they belonged elsewhere.

To obtain information as to what men and how many had enlisted in Massachusetts Adjutant General Schouler, with the consent of Captain Green, U.S.N., commanding the Receiving Ship OHIO at the Charlestown Navy Yard, sent clerks to the Receiving Ship to make a transcript of its enlistment rolls covering the period from the beginning of the war up to February 24, 1864. It was found that between April 13, 1861, and the date just given 22,360 men had enlisted in Massachusetts who had not been credited to the Commonwealth nor to any municipality therein.

Now of these 22,360 men some had enlisted for one year, some for two years, and some for three years. In order to equalize the matter of credits it was decided that the total number of enlistments should be reduced to a three years' basis — that three one year men should count as one, and three two years men should count as two, etc. When thus reduced to a three years basis the total number of enlistments became reduced from 22,360 to 16,625.

Sworn returns were then called for from the municipal authorities throughout the Commonwealth showing the names of all men who were residents within said municipalities and who had enlisted in the Navy prior to Feb. 24, 1864. After the 9,020 men thus claimed by the various cities and towns had been allowed them, there remained a surplus of 7,605 men, reduced to a three years' basis, whose service belonged to Massachusetts. These men were distributed pro rata among all the cities and towns in the State to apply on their quotas in the autumn of 1864.
